

Tradition announces the execution of the first brokered Electricity deal in Serbia

Tradition, a leading interdealer broker, today announced that they have brokered the first OTC Electricity trade in Serbia. Tradition also launched their Trayport screen service today for Serbia Electricity Prices.

The deal brokered today is for the delivery of 5mw October Baseload on the EMS grid (Serbian High Voltage Grid) at a price of 43.75 EUR/MWh.

Jason Curtis, Manager C.E.E, S.E.E and Italian Power at Tradition, says,

"The Launch of the Serbian platform along with the strengthening of our team for Central Eastern and South Eastern Europe shows our continued commitment to improving market liquidity and our services across the whole region. We thank our customers for their support".

Mike Anderson, European Head of Energy at Tradition, comments,

"As the leading Power Broker for Eastern Europe, Tradition is pleased to be the first in yet another new market there. We have built this power business by investing in some excellent people who between them speak nine languages, including Serbian. We see it as an area of continued growth in the future and I am confident that the commitment and professionalism of our team means we will continue to be the market leader in this business".
